AN APPEAL TO NOBLES IMPULSES.

The Herald, in undertaking to do the bidding of ELLIOTT T. GRANT in opposing the Children's Bill, is compelled to make this admission with reference to it: "The avowed object of the bill is a good one. It appeals to that love of fair play which all good men feel, and which, when based upon true grounds, is one of the noblest impulses in human nature to give way to."

Is not the Children's Bill based upon true grounds? Here's what Judge BARRETT says on that score:

"A child may have been committed because of the poverty of its parents and their inability to provide for it, and they may have become better circumstanced; it may have been committed under a misapprehension, and the truth revealed later on it may have been committed on perjured testimony and it is entitled to release. But the law as it now stands sets up an insurmountable bar. It says the commitment is irrevocable, IT IS ALMOST AN INFAMOUS LAW!"

If ever there was an appeal to the love of fair play, "based upon true grounds," the Children's Bill is such an appeal.

A BILLY ARGUMENT.

Almost everything is its humorous aspect, and the agitation of the Children's Bill is no exception.

One of the curious arguments advanced against allowing an appeal from the commitment of police court magistrates is that after a child has been in the custody of one of these juvenile reformatories institutions thirty days it would be so well dressed, bright-eyed and happy that the Supreme Court would be apt to discharge the child on account of its good looks.

This is immense. What a susceptible lot of men there must be on the Supreme Court bench, to be sure! But stay, what's the matter with Mr. GRANT's photographing the children as we come in, so that the Court could, upon review, look upon this picture, and then upon that?

"Let well enough alone" may be good motto, but THE EVENING WORLD does not propose to "let well enough alone" if it can help it. Ergo, the Children's Bill.

MUNDANE MATTERS.

It is to be hoped that no more of our Navy will be lost before the naval parent of the Centennial. The way our men-of-war are being wrecked is a caution.

In Germany the authorities are proposing a law banishing all editors who speak disrespectfully of them. Now, we do things differently in this country. If an editor speaks the authorities in large doses of "tuff," he is sent out of the country as its reward; whereas an editor guilty of disparaging remarks is compelled to stay at home as a punishment. If Murr's (Halsed) lived in Germany he might have been sent here; but, being here, he cannot go there. "Fanny, isn't it?"

In an interview with THE WORLD representative, Collector Erhardt said that in a contest between a Democrat and Republican of equal attainments for an office he should take the best man. It would be a very cold day when the Republican did not prove the best man. Mr. Erhardt is built that way.

AN ANTI-BOULANGER RIOT.

Reuben Stirred Up Over the Banquet of the General's Adherents.

(BY CABLE TO THE PRESS ASSOCIATION.) PARIS, April 8.—The Mot d'Ordre association, Gen. Boulanger has been ordered to quit Belgium.

A banquet of the General's adherents was held at Brussels last night, and the anti-Boulanger feeling of the city manifested itself in violent attacks upon those known to sympathize with the General, and also upon the banqueters on their leaving the hotel where they gathered.

The streets were filled with a riotous mob until midnight, when the police restored order. So far as is known no one was seriously injured, though several persons were roughly used while the disorder lasted.

Despite constant denials it is still positively asserted that Boulanger had repeatedly visited Prince Victor Napoleon.

THE DOCTOR HAD BUT ONE ARM.

But He Rescued His Sister and Had Her Assailant Arrested.

Dr. Charles A. Norton, of Washington, D.C., was a complainant in the Jefferson Market Police Court this morning against James Fitzgerald, fifty-two years old, of 5 East Tenth street, whom he charged with assault.

Dr. Norton, who has but one arm, was going through Waverly place in company with his sister when the prisoner seized the young lady by the arm and pulled and pinched her until she nearly fainted.

Despite the loss of his arm the doctor succeeded in rescuing his sister, having had assistance arrested.

The prisoner said that he was intoxicated and did not know what he was doing. He pleaded so hard for release that the doctor withdrew his complaint.

ROCKETER'S STRIKERS AT WORK.

(SPECIAL TO THE EVENING WORLD.) ROCKESTER, April 8.—Over a hundred of the striking street-car drivers attended the Brick Church in a body last night and were special objects of attention during the service.

Brewer Stevenson's Explanation of the Explosion.

Who Is the Dynamite Expert Who Prepared the Bomb?

"If those men are guilty I will spend every cent I own, if necessary, to convict them. I will show conspirators that they cannot attempt to destroy my property with dynamite or anything else and go unpunished. Even if my life should pay the forfeit I will show those fellows no mercy."

Earnestly, and with difficulty, as he is suffering from a sore throat, David Stevenson, the ale brewer who was above to an EVENING WORLD reporter this morning.

He was lying on a lounge in his handsome brown-stone residence at 7 East Twenty-sixth street when the reporter saw him.

He is too ill to leave the house.

The men he referred to are Thomas Reardon, of No. 301 West Forty-sixth street; Patrick S. O'Connell, of No. 317 Bergen street; and John O'Connell, of No. 317 Bergen street, Brooklyn. They are members of local Assembly No. 8,390, of that district.

He is charged with exploding a dynamite bomb on the Fourth street side of the Ale and Porter Brewing Protective Association, which was exploded on the evening of Feb. 8.

The shock was terrific. Glass was blown out of windows in houses for a block around.

The police began an investigation at once. They could find no trace of the explosive.

They were then directed to the local Assembly No. 8,390, of that district.

Inspector Byrne, the brewer was on the best of terms with his neighbors, but he and they were on bad terms with the Ale and Porter Brewing Protective Association, which had been boycotting him since he was elected.
